Joetta's Key Highlights:

If you want create more financial abundance first focus your attention on creating measurable goals i.e.. SMART goals. Your goals should based on a SMART system:

- Specific - (state a specific dollar amount for example)
- Measurable - (look at where you are now and where you want to go)
- Action Oriented - (something you know you can do towards your goals achievement)
- Realistic - (the goal has to feel real to you, for example, if you want to make $10,000 a month and you're currently making $2000 a month, an example of a realistic goal could be to incrementally increase your income by 20 or 30 percent per month until you reach your goal of $10,000.
- Time Based - (give your goal a deadline that you feel confidently you can achieve)

Blend your SMART goal with the feminine, meaning using an experiential and intentional focus and feelings to draw what you want to you. In other words, if you were to achieve a particular goal what would it look and/or feel like?

Employ more of your senses into your goal setting so you'll have a deeper feeling and connection to the money you want to create. Think beyond mere goal setting to intention setting. This combination creates the Map of Intention.

Ask yourself ~ What are my three financial intentions?

Experiment with goal setting, for example set a goal and start working towards it, all the way checking in to see how you're feeling. Your feelings will play a major role in what goals you set and how quickly you'll achieve them.

For example, let's say you want to take trip to a Paris, buy a postcard or grab photos off the internet of the Eiffel Tower. Just make sure that every time you look at your photo you feel good about your vision. Meditate on it a little everyday.

Second, ground your visual intention in the material world. For example, start setting aside some money towards the physical manifestation of your trip to Paris. Open a separate named bank account and set aside a specific dollar amount on regular basis. Doing this supports your visual intention in the material world.

Fun Financial Forecasting:

Create a spreadsheet in Google Docs or Excel and set-up your categories based on inspiring titles for example: Rent could be changed to my "Dream Palace or Sanctuary", a medical bill payment could be changed to "Wellness Fund".

The idea is to bring more creativity, fun and good feelings into looking at your numbers and to see where your money is going.

Side benefits: Feelings will start to come to the surface about where your money is currently going and that's ok, because you're looking at things from a space of honesty and seeing places where you can take and/or release control.

Base your intention on the actual numbers and then partner with the universe by asking it to help you, get curious, how you can direct your money towards what you truly desire based on the actual numbers?

Begin to look at goal setting in a more holistic way for example:

Grow you

Outside of your comfort zone

Alive and in the adventure

Liberate yourself from all barriers to success

Once you set your goal practice detachment, you want to set your intention and take appropriate actions towards your goal, but you don't want to become too attached to a particular outcome. This is a delicate dance, because belief in what you want to create is important here, but you don't want to be desperate for a specific outcome. Allow something bigger and/or better to come to you.

Desperation is rooted in scarcity. Scarcity feelings just bring about more more scarcity.

Identify the risks you need to take to create more money. Take Joetta's quiz on the unconscious ways we hold ourselves back from creating more. Information on to access the quiz is available on the gift/bonuses page. Info below.

When you hear the word budget to take a moment and notice what comes up for you. That feeling is the seed to your current relationship to money.

Now change the word budget to, "Map of Intention" and notice what feelings come up for you and sit with that for a moment.

Organize your finances/resources to support your intention based on what you currently have. For example, if you want more play in your life, if that's your intention then create a play account and once a month or every two months or three months withdrawal all of the money in that account and go "play" with it.

Explore creating an online savings account with Smartypig.com set it up to take automatic monthly withdrawals from your paycheck or other bank accounts to fund your intention.

You are 20 times more likely to save money towards a specific goal when you a dedicated named savings account that has a purpose.

Look at your money for the past three months and get clarity on the average you've created over the past 90 days. Then set a new income goal based on something that feel you can reach and have an intention based experience.

Your money story doesn't have to be a terror ridden experience. You can actually have fun budgeting, forecasting and goal setting.
